

North Shore Special Education Parent Teacher Association (SEPTA)

presents

“A Parent’s Guide to Reading Disabilities”

Presented by Kerry Leo, MS Ed.

Wednesday, October 16, 2013, 7:30 pm
North Shore High School library

Join SEPTA for an overview of the nature of reading disabilities, the distinguishing characteristics, implications for instruction, and basic treatment strategies for home and school. Parents will explore and learn strategies for supporting their child’s development in language and reading.

All are welcome !

About the Presenter:

As a special educator and authority in reading and related language disabilities, Kerry Leo engages audiences with her vast knowledge and enthusiasm. After several years of classroom experience in the public school setting and many years as a local presenter and speaker, Kerry brought her wealth of information regarding brain-based learning along with techniques and strategies for implementing scientifically-based, research-proven methodologies to schools and fellow educators throughout the Tri-State area.

Kerry is an educational therapist and diagnostician trained extensively and certified in several multi-sensory programs that target a variety of learning needs. Kerry is the past president of the Long Island Branch of the International Dyslexia Association, Member of the International Dyslexia Association, ASCD, Association of Educational Therapists and has served on several boards and public education committees.